Health & Wellness

In 2023, Anne Auguste took custody of her five nieces and nephews. Suddenly, she became responsible for the health and well-being of children who had not been to a doctor or dentist in years. When registering at John F. Kennedy Middle School, she learned they could get physicals and vaccines at the school's health clinic, one of the 145 locations funded by The Children's Trust. Exams led to the discovery of major hearing issues, vision difficulties, critical dental concerns, and even the need for surgery for a serious medical condition. The children were referred to specialists and are now recovering well. "The clinics were like a savior," Auguste said. "We cried together when we found out we could get the help we needed."

Special Populations

Born prematurely and following the death of his twin, Jayden is a miracle baby to his parents. But at 10 months old, they realized Jayden's speech was delayed and he wasn't reaching other milestones typical of toddlers, including only expressing frustration through crying. That changed soon after his parents enrolled him in the Child Development Center at Easterseals South Florida. In one year, he learned to communicate through spoken word and sign language, he loves to participate in circle time and sing-alongs, and is generally a happy toddler. "Since he began at Easterseals, we've seen improvements in his speech and social skills," says his mother. "I know that one day Jayden will be independent on his own."

Kickoff for the World's Game

The Children's Trust joined the U.S. Soccer Foundation, Miami-Dade County, Griffin Catalyst, and others to launch the Miami-Dade Soccer Initiative in 2023. This exciting project will install new mini-soccer pitches in under-resourced communities throughout the county and provide Just Ball League soccer programming for children and youth. The goal is to have 50 new pitches constructed before the 2026 FIFA World Cup and to positively influence the physical, social and emotional wellness of more than 36,000 children by 2030. The Trust is a key partner and funder in this initiative, helping to guide locations and fund programming for the soccer pitches.
